

New Abstract

"A novel method of treating wound involves the use of a barrier aerosol vessel for the delivery of a wound gel to a wound. The wound gel can be sterilized and the present method is extremely useful when the vessel contains multiple doses of the gel since the barrier aerosol arrangement maintains the integrity of the gel product from one use to another.

Preferably the gel contains a hydrocolloid and has a viscosity of between 150 and 800 Pas."